About This Content

The Randomizer is a MIDI effect that generates rhythm patterns– just how random those patterns are is totally customizable. It works sort of like a time machine would, were a time machine to be possible in the physical world.

First, you dial in your settings: will there be a wild variation in the patterns, the velocity, will those patterns be distributed across several tracks (more on that soon). Once you're satisfied you have some coordinates that could yield interesting results, press the Surprise Me! button.

Just as a time machine would propel you through the time-space continuum at alarming velocities we could never quite understand, so too will the Randomizer create patterns based on those coordinates.

Distribute patterns across several tracks. What does that mean? Some pro's use two or three different hi hats to get an interesting texture in the drums. Use the Randomizer to distribute a hi hat pattern, for example, across three different hi hat tracks.

The screenshot displays the Ableton Live software interface, specifically the Arranger view for a drum kit. The interface is divided into several main sections:

- Library: Located on the left, it shows a list of instruments categorized by genre (Acoustic, Dubstep, HipHop, House, Industrial, Pop, Rock, Silent, Soul, Techno, Trance, untitled). The 'DnB' instrument is selected.
- Note Edit: The central area shows a piano roll for the selected instrument. It displays a sequence of notes for various drum sounds: 9 DnB Fuzz Tom, 10 DnB Floor Tom, 11 DnB Low Tom, 12 DnB Mid Tom, 13 DnB Hi Tom, 14 DnB Crisp Tom, and 15 DnB Crash. The notes are arranged in a rhythmic pattern across 5 measures.
- Molecule Tools: A panel at the bottom center provides tools for manipulating notes. It includes options for 'Surprise Mel (Cmd-k)', 'Collaborate', 'Velocity', and 'Auto-Apply'. A dropdown menu is open, showing options like 'Sawtooth', 'Reverse Sawtooth', and 'Sine'. The 'Cluster Count' is set to 3.
- Beat Builder: On the right, this panel shows a 'Barform List' with 8 bars. Each bar contains a sequence of colored blocks representing different drum sounds. Below the list are filters for 'Suggested', 'Similar', 'Favorites', and 'All'.
- Beatform Sequencer: At the bottom right, this panel shows a grid of 8 bars and 8 steps. It includes a 'Suggested Simple' section with a 'Standard' pattern, and buttons for 'Learn', 'Auto', 'Apply', and 'Reset'.

The screenshot displays the Ableton Live software interface, which is a digital audio workstation (DAW) used for music production. The interface is divided into several main sections:

- Top Bar: Shows the current tempo (120.0), time signature (1.1.1), and other project settings.
- Selection Controls (Top Left): Contains various navigation and selection tools, including buttons for 'Find Mode', 'Rename Device', 'Renumber Channel', 'Mappings', 'Mappable Commands', 'Device', 'Ch', 'ID', and 'Midi Mapped Widget'.
- Note Edit (Top Middle): A piano roll view for editing MIDI notes across multiple tracks. The tracks listed are: 1 DnB Kick, 2 DnB Kick2, 3 DnB Sidestick, 4 DnB Snare, 5 DnB Snare2, 6 DnB Closed Hi-Hat, 7 DnB Pedal Hi-Hat, and 8 DnB Open Hi-Hat.
- Arranger (Top Right): A grid view for organizing and sequencing different parts of the song.
- Beat Builder (Right Side): A section for creating and editing drum patterns, including a 'Barform List' and a 'Beatform Sequencer'.
- Molecule Tools (Bottom): A collection of tools for editing MIDI notes, including 'Move Notes', 'Grow/Shrink', and 'Accent/Mod'. It also features a 'Surprise Me!' button and a 'Randomizer'.
